AI summary

During the visit, the patient discussed symptoms consistent with an ankle sprain and sought clarity on possible fractures. The doctor confirmed a mild-to-moderate sprain with no immediate signs of bone injury, advising rest, elevation, and limited weight-bearing for the next few days. A brace and optional physical therapy were recommended to support recovery. Warning signs for delayed healing – such as persistent swelling or instability – were explained. The patient was advised to gradually resume walking after 10–14 days if pain subsides and to avoid high-impact activities until cleared in a follow-up.
